

WILL COUNTY
FOREST PRESERVE
BEING AGITATED

Four of the leading counties of this state have taken steps to save the few acres of woodland remaining within their borders. These four counties are not only saving their forests, but they have opened them up for the use of the people of their communities. They are being used by the farmers, the Boy Scouts, the churches, the orphanages, the fraternal organizations and, in fact, by all people.

Will County should unquestionably adopt the same plan. We still have some fine forests, but—if we are to save them—immediate action should be taken. They should be conserved not only because of their value as timber land and their importance in maintaining and protecting our water supplies, but also because they are the sanctuaries of the flowers and birds that we shall want our children to enjoy.

Therefore, in order that these woodlands may be retained for the use of the people, a movement for a Will County Forest Preserve has been started.

In order that the public may understand the need more fully, the Rotary Club of Joliet is arranging a dinner meeting at the new Chamber of Commerce building for Friday, October 16th at 6:30 p. m., for the purpose of entertaining Mr. H. N. Wheeler, Chief Lecturer of the United States Forestry Service. Tickets will be one dollar.

Following the dinner at 8 p. m., Mr. Wheeler will deliver a Free public address in the banquet room of the Chamber of Commerce Building. This lecture will be illustrated by beautiful lantern slides.

GREEN GARDEN
FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY FACES SUIT

Suit to recover $3,000 for property damage caused by fire was filed in the circuit court Monday by Adam J. Heisner, of Frankfort, against the Green Garden Farmers Insurance Company.

The property destroyed by fire, a dwelling house, was insured for $2,500 but under a clause in the policy held by the plaintiff, the latter contends that he is entitled to recover $3,000 or 1/2 the value of his property.

Heisner's house burned March 20 this year. At the time of the fire it was untenanted and had been unoccupied for 60 days, according to A. H. Krusemark, attorney for the insured.

Regarding unoccupied houses, one clause in the policy reads as follows: "In case any house be vacant or unoccupied to exceed 30 days the company shall be held liable for not more than 1/2 of any loss or damage."

It is on this clause that Heisner is bringing suit. The company has offered to pay Heisner half of the face value of the policy, which would be $1,250, according to Mr. Krusemark, but the insured points out that the clause relating to unoccupied houses specifically states that the company is liable for "one half the loss or damage" suffered, and does not say one half the value as fixed by the policy or anything like that.

Heisner claims the property was worth $6,000 and if the insurance company is liable for one half the loss, it owes him $3,000.

It is understood that this clause, upon which Heisner is bringing suit is in all of the policies written by the defendant.

PURCHASES FEEDER CATTLE AT CHICAGO

Chris Kohl of Mokena has just received 50 head of feeding steers which he purchased on the Chicago market this week.

These cattle weighed 860 lbs., are Hereford steers and cost him $7 per cwt.

The actual purchasing was done by the Chicago Producers Commission Association which is the co-operative commission agency owned and controlled by the live stock producers.

Mr. Kohl is planning to market these cattle during the late winter months when he feels he will be able to sell them at a comfortable profit.

Mr. and Mrs. Bethel have gone on a motor trip to Iowa and upon their return will make their home in the flat above the home of the groom's parents.

An 8 1/2 lb. son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lew Deadmore in Silver Cross hospital Wednesday morning. The young man will henceforth be known as Daniel Lew Deadmore.

Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Francis have gone to Washington D. C. where Mr. Francis will take treatments under the care of his son who is a physician.

POPULATION OF 10,000
FOR MIDLOTHIAN

The new census for Cook county, Ill., Chicago, has placed an additional 10,000 acres adjacent to their new home addition to Midlothian.

This property is bounded on the east by Adams Ave., on the west by Madison Ave., and fronts on 141 St., one of Midlothian's main thoroughfares. It will be improved with a complete water system, macadam roads and many new homes which will be completed at once.

This is the 5th unit that this firm has developed in the Midlothian district, about 2,500 parcels have been sold, many having purchased for homesites as well as investment. It is said that in three years time Midlothian will have a population of 10,000 as there are many merchants contemplating establishing in business there. There is no doubt that this section is the future home site of the Calumet District.

According to the price that is being paid for acreage for subdivision purposes at present, it will not be long before subdividers will be unable to obtain farm lands this side of Joliet without paying tremendous prices.

It is said that Babson, a well known statistician, forecasts that Greater Chicago will extend to Milwaukee on the north, Aurora on the west and Joliet and Gary on the south, a population of 6,000,000 within this area is anticipated by 1950.

WILL ATTEND BANQUET

The Frankfort M. W. A. Camp has shown a decided increase in interest of late.

NEW LENOX MAN
LOCATES MOTHER
AFTER 20 YEARS

George Archer, a merchant in New Lenox is much overjoyed these days and believes this is the day of miracles. He claims to have found his mother whom he has not seen since he was an infant at which time his home was disrupted and he spent subsequent years in a school.

When he was scarcely more than 2 years old, his mother Mrs. Ethel Archer, was sent to a sanitarium from the home in Rock Island, Ill., and George and another brother, Vernon, were sent to a training school at Glenwood, near Chicago Heights, when the home was broken up.

Vernon went back to his father after a few years but George stayed at the school for 6 or 8 years. On his release, he went to work on farms near New Lenox, making his home of late years with Fred Pieper. In the meantime his parents were told he was dead and he in turn had no means of tracing his family and was led to believe that both his father and mother had died.

It might have gone on this way for several years had not romance developed. Altho established in his store, George found many obstacles in his path. He was always to be considered a homeless waif in the neighborhood and he came to think it was unfair to the girl. Then he got into action.

Rock Island was his home own he was told. In hope that he might gain some information, Archer went to Rock Island Monday. He inquired all over until he found a hotel-keeper who thought his wife knew some one by the name of Archer but had not seen them for several years.

Archer walked to the door of the house pointed out and knocked. A woman past middle age opened the door cautiously, then with more speed.

"Why, its—its my George", she cried tremulously and the next moment he was in the arms of his mother. His resemblance to his four brothers and his mother made recognition easy.

He spent the afternoon visiting to make up for the 20 years separation. His mother had returned home from the sanitarium within 2 years after George had been sent away and was led to believe George was dead. His father died a few years ago.

"But I never expected to come back a grown man, almost an old man" said George. "Here I am 30 years old."

"No George," said his mother, "You're only 26 years old."

MRS. WM. BUTTS WAS VERY SICK

Gives Full Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Remarkable Recovery

Wellston, O.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make me strong. I was troubled with my back and sides hurting me till I could not do my work, and whenever I caught cold it made me irregular. Since I have taken the Vegetable Compound my side and back don't bother me and I can do my housework and care for my children now, where before I did not feel like doing anything or going around. After my first child was born about four years ago I saw an advertisement in the paper about the Vegetable Compound. I knew it would help me, but I was afraid to try it because people said it would help you to have children and I knew I was having children fast enough. But I thought if it would help me it would be better to have a whole house full of children and have good health. I became stronger from taking it and my husband says I look like a live woman instead of a dead one. When Spring comes I am going to take your Blood Medicine as I am very thin. I will answer letters from any woman who wishes to ask about your medicine."

Mrs. WILLIAM BUTTS, Wellston, Ohio.

A TRANSFORMATION

SYNOPSIS.—Living in the small English village of Darbury, old-fashioned and sedate place, Barbara Stockley, daughter of a widowed mother, is soon to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Rochdale, rich and well connected. Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as an aviator, is to be the pilot. At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the out-and-dried conventions of her small town. They set out, Barbara, her aunt, Croft, and a mechanic. Word in a few days comes to Darbury that the plane is missing and its occupants believed lost. Croft and Barbara, after the wreck of the airplane in a furious storm, reach an apparently uninhabited island in the Pacific ocean. The other two members of the party had perished. The two castaways build a shelter. In Croft's absence Barbara is attacked by a black man, evidently a savage. Croft rescues her.

PART TWO—Continued.

He could see now, in the stronger light, that all were armed with long spears, two also carrying bows and arrows. The third, an old man, wore round his neck a large clam-shell disk—emblem of the rank of chief—and through his nose-cartridges a dark stone. Rings, probably of tortoise-shell, hung from his ears.

Croft wondered if this were a visit of negotiation, with a view to a compact of friendship with visitors to their island. He recognized them for members of the huge scattered family of Melanesians, or Papuans, which have some undoubted connection with the African blacks, and are to be found in numberless South Sea Islands as well as in Melanesia proper. Although their dialect is more or less local, there is sufficient similarity to make it fairly intelligible to any one accustomed to the variations.

A few minutes, and Croft's illusion of a friendly compact was destroyed. Hostility was evident. He soon realized that an attack was being organized for the following night, though he could not distinguish the plans being laid.

Emboldened by the absence of any sign of their enemy, the men remained standing for several minutes, gazing down the slope at the solitary hut wherein Barbara lay unprotected. At last, after an indistinct colloquy, they moved slowly forward in its direction.

For a moment Croft's heart seemed to stop beating. To expose himself, unarmed, would mean certain death, and the consequent abandonment of the girl, whose life now rested upon his, to a fate probably far worse. Inside the hut, if he could but reach it, lay the suitcase containing his revolver. Should he risk all and dash from his hiding place or—? A sigh of relief escaped his lips when the men suddenly halted. For what seemed an eternity he watched them confer together, evidently divided in opinion on the wisdom of their venture. When at last they turned and made off toward the south of the island, he found his clenched hands were shaking and his brow was wet. He hurried down to the hut, where he found a white-faced girl ineffectually barricading the door with suitcases.

She uttered a welcoming cry on his appearance at the window.

"How did you escape? Where were you? What can we do?"

To his own amazement perhaps as much as hers, he laughed—almost happily.

"They have gone away," he replied. "We can't do anything at present."

She gazed at him in some bewilderment, knowing nothing of the reaction which had caused that strange light in his face; and he laughed again, boyishly; then leaned farther in for a closer inspection of the blue-clad figure with its cloud of hair.

"You are better?" he asked.

The paleness of her cheeks changed suddenly to red under his scrutiny.

"I—I'm all right," she muttered, turning away.

"I will go back for the water," he remarked; and his face disappeared from the aperture.

Barbara's mind was uncomfortably confused. Safe in some refuge, she had seemed to be sleeping for hours. When she awoke she instinctively sought for a hand which proved not to be there. Throughout the terrified moments that ensued, vague impressions of some midnight event chased elusively through her brain. They were intensified by Croft's appearance. Vainly she tried to capture the threads; to separate the real from the chaos of delirium. All was confusion, jumbled repetitions of accumulated horrors. She caught first at one thread; then lost it and caught at another. But ever at one point her cheeks burned. How much was true? Surely not—. The more she thought, the more convinced did she become of its incredible reality. . . . How could she face her companion? He alone could place the unraveled threads in her hands. But how to make him do so? How—

So engrossed were her thoughts that she started violently at the sound of his voice again at the window.

"Your nerves are awfully weak," he remarked.

"They are not!" she snapped indignantly. Was she always to feel foolish and, above all, appear so, with this man?

Opening the door, she took in one of the basins, without looking up.

A scented, steaming bath could not have been more welcome than that little basin of cold water. The freshness invigorated her, reviving a girlish interest in appearances. Unpacking a tiny traveling mirror, she proceeded to do up her hair, dressing in one of the cool washing frocks intended for Australia.

Croft was thumping on the hut, demanding breakfast, before the completion of this toilet. His quick glance took in her dainty and very civilized appearance down to the gray suede shoes; but he made no comment.

Again the contents of the old tin box proved invaluable, with the addition of bananas and coconut. They spread their store upon the ground outside, in the early morning sunshine.

Conversation languished. Croft seemed abstracted, deep in thought. Her riddle of the night lay unsolved. . . .

After several furtive glances at his face, she made a plunge.

"I want to know—"

"Yes? What?" Quickly his eyes searched her own, causing her to lower them confusedly.

"I can't remember what happened—I'm afraid I—did I behave rather stupidly, last night?"

He stretched out his hand for a banana, peeling it with irritating deliberation before replying.

"You were, naturally, slightly unhinged after all your experiences."

This guarded reply was unsatisfactory.

She felt exasperated. Looking across at him, she fancied the suspicion of a smile hovered around his lips.

"Oh, I quite realize that!" His tone caused her to look up quickly again.

"Why are you laughing?" she asked uneasily.

"Why are you so afraid?" he retorted.

Nonplused, she took refuge in a dignified silence. Finishing her breakfast, she looked round the bay—at the rugged hill beside them, the palms and dense forest trees in the background, the coral shingle and white sand stretching down to the magnificent blue of the lagoon, in the distance the reef and vast stretch of limitless sea; the intensely vivid colors and contrast shone in the sunlight with extraordinary brilliancy.

"It's all very beautiful," she said at last, conversationally.

"It is!" he agreed warmly, rising to his feet. Bringing his mug filled with water, he sat down close beside her.

"Now, please mend my head."

Barbara was concerned over his palor and the lines surrounding his eyes.

"You look worn out!" she exclaimed involuntarily. "Didn't you sleep well last night?"

"Not a wink!" He glanced quickly up at her. Whereupon her unraveled confusion returned fourfold; and she finished her job in silence.

"I'm going up the hill to the wireless," he observed then. "You need not fear the natives. They won't return until they have mustered their numbers."

At her look of alarm he continued hurriedly: "I've got a scheme for scaring them off altogether. I shan't be long away. If you shout, I shall hear."

There was no suggestion of her company being required. She watched him disappear, with a sickening sense of the oppressive loneliness that she dreaded; but pride forbade her uttering a word to detain him. Then, with unconscious imitation of Croft, she threw her head a little back; clenched her hands; and entered the hut. . . .

While the natives hurried to the south, to prepare for battle, the man sat on the ground beside the transmitter, staring out to sea, his brain working on the scheme to which he had just alluded; his mind torn between conflicting decisions. In this predicament, at the mercy of a tribe of hostile savages, there were but two forlorn hopes of defense. One lay in the little weapon down in the hut, with its limited supply of ammunition; the other in the inherent superstition of the islanders. If once the latter could be roused; if his ruse, for all its wildness, succeeded, their lives might yet be safe. On the other hand, wireless messages might reach a ship in time. There was not enough electrical energy for both purposes. . . . Which should it be?

"My God!" he muttered to himself. "Was ever a man in such a d-d position?"

IV

No better tonic could have been given to Croft's mind than this necessity for immediate action. Until he had made his decision and the details were matured, he forbore to alarm Barbara with the prospect before them.

For about two hours he was absent. Then a spiral of gray smoke ascended from the hilltop, and he appeared with his arms full of wire.

"I have left a beacon burning, in case a passing vessel—" Abruptly he ceased, standing still, his eyes upon the figure emerging from the hut.

"A transformation!" he exclaimed; and there was a strange new tone in his voice.

The dainty shoes and stockings had been discarded, the hairpins thrown away. With a long thick plait swinging down her back, sleeves rolled up, bare feet sinking in the sand, she flashed him a shy look of inquiry.

"It seems more natural—here," she said.

Thus did Barbara take the first step from out the net of lifelong conventions, and tread the free spaciousness beyond.

"You fit in so well—as if it is your natural sphere!" she added.

He smiled half to himself, patted the spare seat beside him. Rather wonderingly she approached, looking, he thought with compunction, extremely young and delicately made.

To inform a sensitive girl of the forthcoming attack of possible cannibals was, to Croft, ten times more formidable than meeting them single-handed. He was not versed in the handling of these situations.

Taking her hand, he drew her down close beside him; then, in a few curt sentences, he told her.

The fingers he held closed convulsively upon his own; her free hand clenched itself upon her knee; the faint color drained away, leaving her face quite white.

"Can't we go—hide somewhere—on the reef?" she urged, turning dark eyes of fear upon him.

He shook his head. Very thoughtfully, from every point of view, had he considered the position. Should they, by hiding, elude the natives to-night, it would be but a respite. The same danger would surround them every moment they spent here; they could never know peace or safety. For some reason these natives were hostile; something must be done to overcome their hostility. Until and unless a friendly compact could be made, they must be forced to leave the two white people alone, through fear. All this he explained to the girl, who recognized the wisdom of it, as well as what she deemed the impossibility.

"Two! Against, possibly, hundreds! How can we make them fear us?" she asked hopelessly.

"Through their superstition," he replied promptly. "Once make them believe we deal with the supernatural, or possess magical powers, and they will make us tabu. The dread of death or disease from violating a tabu will cause them to shun us like lepers."

Barbara, inexperienced in natives' ways, was only half convinced. She listened incredulously to the scheme he propounded, her knowledge of electricity being limited.

"I will get some sticks," he concluded, rising; "and place everything in readiness; then I shall turn in for a bit. This afternoon we'll strengthen the walls of the hut; and I'll put up a partition. Then we shall each have a room until we can build another hut. Plenty of work before us, if rescue doesn't come soon!"

Silently, she helped to collect sticks, an extraordinary numbness pervading her mind. Croft's spirits rose. He had faced and eluded death too often to fear it. His confidence in this simple ruse puzzled her.

Collecting the rubber shock absorber belonging to the wireless outfit, he broke the sticks into short stakes, showing Barbara how to cover them. This done, he proceeded to fix them firmly in the ground round the hut, then attached the aerial to the top of each; thus forming a wire circle a few inches above the ground, as far from the hut as the amount of aerial permitted. The two ends were carried through the entrance and connected to the transmitter within.

"Now!" he exclaimed, "when I wave, press the key on the transmitter here, and watch the result."

He went out to the wire; and, kneeling down, placed one hand about half an inch above it. Raising the other, he gave the signal.

She pressed the key as directed. Immediately, a series of bright blue sparks flashed, like fireflies, from the wire to his hand, which he repeatedly jerked away; then, delighted with its success, he returned to her.

"You see," he explained, "the volume of current is always large with wireless, therefore takes effect by sparking at the moment of contact. The human body is, of course, a conductor. Our visitors will get the shock of their lives—especially as they usually approach any object of attack by waddling along on their stomachs!"

He chuckled with the anticipatory enjoyment of a schoolboy over a practical joke; then suggested having some food.

Mechanically she fetched Aunt Dolly's box and drew out tins of beef and coffee, heroically trying to share in his confidence.

He talked on, compelling her to attend, diverting her thoughts until the meal ended, covertly watching her every expression. Then he drew her within the hut, to rest.

Mechanically again, she entered, going to the little window and looking out, dreading, toward the palms. He fixed up the door, then came over to her.

"You don't feel at all nervous?" he asked nonchalantly.

She turned, with a forced smile. "Oh, no! . . . Dear me, no! . . . Of course not," she answered, with terrific emphasis.

"That's all right! You're a plucky soul for a girl!"

She flashed an indignant look at him, which, in spite of herself, faded as she met the unexpected laughter in his eyes.

"You wanted adventure!" he reminded her. "You wanted to 'feel life,' to learn the 'meaning' of things, to sound the 'deep chords.' Well! You have your heart's desire—at the very bedrock of nature! Seize it, Barbara! Drink to the very dregs! Then tell me if you have discovered what—is missing."

Surprised, she listened silently. He turned away, laid one of their coats just inside the door, and threw himself down upon it. Within a few minutes he was sleeping the sleep of sheer exhaustion.

But the girl sat for long under the little window, lost in thought, wondering over his words. And ever her mind reverted to one sentence. A few words of praise from one whose opinion you have unconsciously learned to respect, and what a world of courage do they bring in their train!

"Do you understand a revolver?" he inquired.

She turned round, mingled fear and relief in her face. "Have you one? No; I have never fired one in my life. I wouldn't dare!"

"Well, I want to show you how to use this little beast, in case anything goes wrong and you are left—"

She laughed, miserably.

"If they manage to kill you, they will soon finish me off!"

He regarded her in silence, for a moment.

"They wouldn't kill you," he said quietly. "Do you understand my meaning?"

Her face went very white. For a few minutes she paced up and down, hands clenched, facing this new terror, striving to control herself before this man whose very look discouraged weakness. The coolness of his bearing, as he stood playing with the weapon in his hands, calmed her, bracing her to a simulation of the same fearlessness.

"Show me," she said, going to him.

This is interesting. How will a girl of Barbara's upbringing react to these primitive conditions?

Symbolic Indian Masks

According to the Bureau of American Ethnology, tribes of Indians throughout North America wore masks at religious festivals and at some social gatherings. Sometimes the priests alone were masked, though in other cases the entire company would appear in masks. The false faces generally represented supernatural beings. The simplest form of mask was one prepared from the head of a buffalo, deer, or some other animal. The mask stood, not for the actual animal, but for the type of animal and its supernatural characteristics, and the person wearing it was for the time being endowed with the distinctive quality of the animal.

Our Sad Heritage of Sin

By REV. GEORGE E. GUILLE
Extension Department, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—By one man sin entered into the world.—Rom. 5:12.

The third chapter of Genesis is the divine record of the origin of sin, its awful results and its perfect remedy.

Rev. G. E. Guille.

That single restriction placed upon the man and woman whom God had made was not an arbitrary thing, but a merciful provision to remind them, as the creatures of His hand, of their subjection to the Creator.

Into that garden of delight came Satan, "the prince of this world," fallen now from his pristine glory but still "transformed into an angel of light," and "wiser than any living creature which the Lord God had made." The word rendered "serpent" is literally, "the shining one," and thus it would seem that Satan appeared to the woman in his glorious personality, overwhelming her with his wisdom and dignity and brilliance. The words in which God pronounced the curse upon him would thus become a figure of speech to make more emphatic than any literal words could his utter prostration and humiliation: "Upon thy belly shalt thou go."

It was Satan who spoke to the woman, and this utterance furnishes a clue to the sphere of his attack. It is the truth of God! He said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said? He is not so much the enemy of morals, as of faith. "What God hath spoken" is the object of his attack—questioning its truth, corrupting it, or denying it altogether. Thus his ministers who are "transformed as the ministers of righteousness" are constantly assailing the integrity of Holy Scripture and contradicting its truth.

Satan assumes the role of philanthropist: Hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden? Observe the subtle insinuation: Surely the good God would not be so unkind as to withhold from the creatures of His love anything that His hands have made! He is attacking God's goodness as well as His truth.

To entertain suspicion of God is to lose innocence. In the woman's answer that loss is apparent. She corrupts the word of God in three particulars. First, she omits a word. God had said, Of every tree of the garden ye may freely eat. She leaves out the word "freely." Second, she adds to the prohibition these words, Neither shall ye touch it. God had said nothing as to their touching it. Third, she changed a certainty into a contingency; God had said, "Yet shall surely die." She said, "Lest ye die."

Contrast with this the use which Jesus made of the Word of God when Satan tempted Him. Three times he said, "It is written," and quoted verbatim from the book of Deuteronomy. By the word of thy lips have I kept me from the paths of the destroyer." And the devil leaveth Him.

Emboldened now by the woman's reply, Satan flatly contradicts the Word of God. Ye shall not surely die, for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as God knowing good and evil. Here began "the lie" that has become so universally popular. "You are not going to die." On every hand we hear denial of the truth concerning the punishment of the wicked. Every false religious system on earth denies it. Modernists proclaim it far and wide.

Satan was but setting forth the essence of man's philosophy in every age and every school. "Ye shall be like God, knowing." The pursuit of knowledge, independent of God, is what he proposes. And still the wisdom of the world is chosen in preference to the wisdom of God, that "hidden wisdom" which God ordained before the world unto our glory. And the woman believed that lie rather than the truth of God! Oh, the hideous results for herself and for all the race!

O soul, believe God! He calls to the ends of the earth to hear His Word, and the only escape from Satan's dominion, the only means of attaining true wisdom, is in believing what God says concerning Him "who has been made unto us wisdom from God, even righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."

"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Are you "in Christ"?

Intelligent Hearers

The most intelligent hearers are those who enjoy most heartily the simplest preaching. It is not they who clamor for superlatively intellectual or esthetic sermons. Daniel Webster used to complain of some of the preaching to which he listened. "In the house of God," he wanted to "meditate upon the simple verities, and the undoubted facts of religion"; not upon mysteries and abstractions.—Austin Phelps.

Kindness and Courtesy

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.—M. A. Kelly.

PAUL WRITES TO THE CORINTHIANS

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 13:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."—I Cor. 13:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What Love Does.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Working Together.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Thing in the World.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Hope of the World.

The occasion of the writing of this epistle was:

1. The existence of rival factions contending each other. Some were for Paul; some for Apollos; some for Peter, and some for Christ. This factious spirit was threatening the disruption of the church.
2. Their failure to carry out church discipline.
3. Their going to law with each other.
4. Indifference to gross immorality.
5. Letters requesting information as to:
  - a. Marriage and divorce.
  - b. Food connected with sacrifices and festivals.
  - c. The exercise of spiritual gifts.
  - d. Disorder in the public assemblies.
  - e. The presence in the church of certain ones who denied the resurrection of the dead.

1. The Pre-eminence of Love (vv. 1-13).

It transcends:

1. Speaking With Tongues (v. 1).
- For men to possess the loftiest eloquence and be lacking in love is to be as booming brass or a clanking cymbal.

2. The Gift of Prophecy (v. 2). To be able to penetrate the mystery of nature and Providence is good, but to love is better.

3. Faith of the Most Vigorous Kind (v. 2).

Even though one should have sufficient vital faith as to remove mountains it is of less value than love.

4. Philanthropy of the Most Generous Sort (v. 3).

Even though one should have such a spirit of altruism as to be moved to surrender all earthly goods for the sake of the poor, unless actuated by love, he would have no recognition before God.

II. The Attributes of Love (vv. 4-7).

1. It Is Long-Suffering and Is Kind (v. 4).

It means not only to bear long, but to be kind all the while.

2. It Is Free From Envy (v. 4).

Those who are controlled by love are entirely free from the spirit of envy because of the superior worth and success of others.

3. It Is Free From Boasting and Vanity (v. 4).

Love strives to do good to all without seeking admiration and applause.

4. It Is Decorous (v. 5).

Love is always polite and mannerly; knows how to behave at all times.

5. It Is Unselfish (v. 5).

It is always seeking the good of others while forgetful of self.

6. It Does Not Give Way to Passion (v. 5).

It is not quick tempered.

7. It Takes No Delight in Evil (vv. 5-6).

It does not impute evil motives to others and is free from suspicion. Love has no sympathy with that which is evil.

8. It Bears All Things (v. 7).

That is, it incases itself in the gracious mantle of love and shuts out all evil.

9. Love Is Trustful (v. 7).

It looks into the future with confidence.

10. Love Is Hopeful (v. 7).

It seizes the things of the future, brings them into the present and appropriates them for its use.

11. Love Is Firm (v. 7).

It intelligently sets its attention to things that are right, and with unvarying strength, holds fast.

III. The Permanence of Love (vv. 8-13).

1. It Outlasts Prophecy (v. 8).

Prophecy in the Scriptures means both a foretelling of events and the teaching of the Word of God.

2. It Outlasts Speaking With Tongues (v. 8).

The race once spoke the same language, but as judgment for sin and rebellion, God brought confusion and caused the people to speak many tongues.

3. It Outlasts Knowledge (v. 8).

The knowledge we now have is only relative, but the day is coming when the relative knowledge shall be done away by the coming in of a wider and nobler intelligence.

A COUNTRY EDITOR'S REPLY TO UNCLE SAM.

The government's efforts to obtain free publicity from small town publishers and the editor's reaction is shown in the following letter. It is in response to the Post Office Department's request for free space.

Cuba, N. Y.

May 19, 1925.

Information Service, P. O. Department, Washington, D. C.
Gentlemen:

I have your letter requesting the publication of various articles urging the public to put the address of the sender on every piece of mail entrusted to the postal service so that if not delivered it may be returned.

May I suggest that the department would get a great deal more general and hearty response to this request were it not for the fact that, after the press educates the public to the necessity of putting return addresses on envelopes, the government steps in and grabs the work of printing said return card envelopes by doing the work at such a price that no private institution can compete with it. This is due, in part, of course, to the large contract which the government is able to let for the work, to the economies of production thus made possible, to the fact that the government can afford a deficit, while private individuals cannot, and to the further fact that where as I and other publishers must pay transportation charges on our envelopes, we are also compelled, in the form of taxes, to pay transportation on the envelopes the government prints, since they are franked through from factory to destination and we help pay the bill.

We note that in the free publicity which you wish us to print, you advise that in order to insure that they will reach destination all packages should be "wrapped in stout paper and tied with strong string."

Why then, shouldn't the government get into the paper and cord business and sell suitable materials to the patrons of the postoffice at much less than the local dealers could buy them wholesale, just as it does in the matter of printed envelopes?

And why not sell shoes, and stockings and neckties and ties and tobacco in the same way?

Why pick on the printer alone as the subject of Uncle Sam's cut-throat, no-profit competition? Our observation has been that the printers and publishers have donated to Uncle Sam more of practically their sole product, that is publicity, than all other producers have given him put together. Their reward is that they are singled out to have their means of livelihood taken away from them so far as low prices can capture the envelope printing business.

Just to show that I am not only fairer than Uncle Sam, but even generous, I am going to use your requested publicity. And I will trust that one of these days the government will realize that it is engaged in most unfair competition with a large class of its Citizens, and will cease the practice.

Yours very truly,

Elmer E. Conrath.

It has been shown that a horse can draw one and two-thirds times as much of a load on a metal track as on a good asphalt surface, five times as much as on cobblestone paving and about twenty times the load it can pull on an ordinary mud road.

TINLEY PARK

Mr. and Mrs. Sandige of Chicago have moved into the Detwiler flat. Mrs. Sandige is teaching the 3rd, 4th and 5th grades in the local public school. She was formerly Miss Helen Beckler and taught schools in this section before.

A large company of relatives, neighbors and friends congregated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fulton Tuesday, the occasion being the celebration of Mrs. Fulton's birthday. The evening was pleasantly spent, with games and other amusements following which a sumptuous luncheon was served. The guests were unanimous in declaring they had one grand time.

Recently a large company of relatives and friends pleasantly reminded Mrs. C. Goessel, one of Tinley's pioneer residents of her birthday. A delightful time was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Ernest Englehardt was hostess to a company of friends and relatives and neighbors Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being her birthday. A fine time is reported by all those present.

The M. E. church conference reports show that the Tinley Park pastorate of the M. E. church is to be supplied.

W. C. Holstein has moved into his new home this week.

The radio bug has invaded Tinley Park very strong the past week. Harry W. Bettenhausen has sold and installed Atwater Kent sets in the following places: Arthur Schoenbeck home, Wm. Rix home, Peter Parenti and in the tonsorial parlor of Walter Mancke. Now the patrons will be entertained with music while being shaved or having other tonsorial work performed. Atta boy!

Mrs. Stoeckman who recently purchased the old school building, is having same moved onto her lot and is having the building converted into an apartment house.

Building operations on the new house of Conrad Bettenhausen are progressing nicely.

Helen, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bettenhausen had a narrow escape from serious injury Monday when she fell from a chair with a spoon in her mouth, the sharp edge of which nearly cut thru her lip.

The bunco party held at the local school last Wednesday night was quite well attended. The proceeds are to be used to purchase school equipment.

The bazaar and chicken supper given by the Ladies Aid of the German M. E. church at Saenger hall last Thursday night was a record breaker for attendance and sales. Practically all the booths were sold out long before closing time. The supper was also a wonderful success.

A group of young folks are going hold a Halloween party at the Saenger hall on the evening of Oct. 29th.

A dance given by a Chicago club will be held at the Saenger hall on October 30th. On October 31st a dance will be given at this hall by an athletic club from Harvey.

Dr. and Mrs. A. Ickstadt entertained their son Albert and his wife at dinner Sunday.

Has anyone in this section got a McCormick or Deering binder of the old sway bar type of 33 years ago? The International Harvester Company is seeking a machine of this type. If anyone around here has such a machine kindly notify Christ or Eddie Goessel, local I. H. C. representatives.

John Rix went to Blue Island one day last week and had a tooth extracted. While on his way home, the tooth cavity started to bleed and after he got home a hemorrhage set in. Dr. A. Ickstadt was called and stopped the flow of blood.

Postmaster and Mrs. C. Andres visited over Sunday in Aurora with the formers brother.

The Zion Lutheran church will hold their annual bazaar and supper at the Saenger hall the afternoon and evening of October 22nd. There will be a fine assortment of articles on sale at the various booths. Every one is invited.

Mrs. Henry Wilke and daughter Miss Jessie visited in Joliet Monday.

Building activities are still going on and it is understood several more new houses are to be started before winter.

The boys of the Tinley Park school have formed a foot ball team and are getting to be good players.

Hick & Mesenbrink had a carload of potatoes on track the past week which they sold at $1.60 per bushel

J. & H. Green
Discount Stamps

How to save almost 25 cents each year for every dollar per month you are spending.

As most of you know—we use the Sperry & Hutchinson Discount System here in The Boston Store. Been using it for more than sixteen years! It is in this connection that we give you S. & H. Green Discount Stamps when you pay cash and also for full payment of bills within thirty days or less. We give you these stamps on your down payment when you open an installment account.

Ordinarily you are entitled to one stamp on every dime represented in the amount of CASH which the transaction involves. However, in keeping with our fixed policy of generosity in dealing with our patrons we give you two stamps on each dime EVERY TUESDAY and FRIDAY unless we are holding a special sale or some similar event in which case it is customary for us to post notice to such effect at our stamp desk on the ground floor.

The use of this system by a merchant with whom you do your trading enables you to save a considerable sum of money each year in ADDITION to what you save as a result of the low prices at which such merchant invariably sells his goods—lower than the merchant who uses some less effective plan for securing and holding trade,—as he naturally does a much larger volume of business and can therefore well afford to sell at a somewhat smaller profit on each transaction.

One of the many advantages of the S. & H. System, is that the Stamp Saver may put all of the S. & H. Stamps he receives (no matter from what store he receives them) right into the same book or books—and he may also turn the filled books right in for what he wants in any of the stores which give the stamps.

This enables the Stamp Saver to fill his book real quickly as most everyone is spending money for SOMETHING or other almost every day. It therefore only remains for you to INSIST that you be given S. & H. Green Stamps and to patronize as exclusively as possible, the merchants and dealers who give you them, in order to actually reduce your expenditures almost twenty-four per cent each year for each dollar per month which you spend.

If your monthly expenditures average $100.00 you can by patronizing merchants using the S. & H. Discount System fill 20 or more stamp books yearly—by taking advantage of the various exchange privileges by which you may secure S. & H. Green Stamps in return for your soap wrappers, package fronts, coupons, etc. This means more than $25.00 worth of choice merchandise FREE every year and explains why so many housewives save them.

FRANKFORT

The Ladies Aid of the St. Peters church, will give their bazaar at the parlor November 12.

Mrs. Christ Fink entertained the Pinochle Club at her home last Friday afternoon, cards were played at four tables, prizes went to Mrs. Minnie Fink and Mrs. Frank Cheney, refreshments were served at the end of the game.

Manson LaHue, who has been ill for some time is somewhat improved at present writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harnach and son Walter returned home Saturday from Michigan where the spent a week with relatives.

Edward Kaffer of Ohio, spent the week end with his sister and brother in-law Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fralich.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Oetter at Andres, were surprised by the Pinochle Club of Frankfort last Sunday evening, cards were played at four tables, after which refreshments were served, all present reported a good time.

Miss Anna Oetter is clerking at Frank Kohlhaugen's store.

The Martha Sewing circle will present a play at the church parlor Friday evening Oct. 16th at 8 p. m.

Chas Pfeifer, section foreman on the E. J. & E. is having his vacation.

The Confirmation school of the St. Peters church with Rev. Lambrecht as instructor, started Tuesday afternoon, with 10 scholars, there will be school Tuesday and Saturday afternoon at the church school.

Mr. and Mrs. James Forward, of Wisconsin, spent Wednesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Levi Doty. They were on their way to Detroit to spend the winter with their son. The trip was made by auto. They spent the summer at the summer home up in Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Saulman of Indiana are staying at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Zechlin.

Mrs. Wilbur Meyers of California who has spent several months here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sippel and her sister, Mrs. Christie Fink, expects soon to leave for her home.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Klatt, Jr., of Joliet visited with the former's parents the first of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Klatt returned Sunday from a delightful ten day sight seeing trip thru the east. They stopped off at Buffalo, Albany, and Niagara Falls, New York. From Albany they went by boat down the Hudson River to New York City. Here they saw many points of historical interest, also the statue of Liberty.

A number of property owners on Niethammer Avenue met Monday night at the home of Wm. Schmuhl to consider a drainage matter.

Jacob Knupp is taking an active part in building up Mokena. The past summer he erected a new residence in the north part of town in the Niethammer sub division section and it is understood he is planning to erect two more dwellings in the same neighborhood.

Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Sippel is ill with Scarlet fever.

Milton Krapp is ill with Diptheria at his home, his mother is caring for him, while his wife and two children are at the E. P. Krapp home. Mr. Robert Wood, who bought the new home Frank Vally built last Summer, has sold it to Mr. Myers of Blue Island, and has moved to Chicago.

Nels Sorensen and family have moved into the place vacated by Richard Hensel.

Russel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Sorensen, who is ill with Scarlet fever, is improving.

Arthur Zumstein, who has been enjoying a trip in the Western states, has returned.

Miss Lucille Werner, who is ill with Rheumatism, is better, but is not well enough to be out.

Mrs. Andrew Capple entertained the 500 club last Wednesday.

Mr. W. J. Zimmerman and family who left Mokena Labor Day by motor, for Salt Lake City, arrived there two weeks ago and had a fine trip.

Miss Esther Hellmuth, who was operated upon last Wednesday at Silver Cross hospital in Joliet, is doing nicely, her sister, Hulda had her Tonsils removed Tuesday morning at the same hospital. They were removed to their home Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore returned last week from a motor trip to Indiana and Kentucky.

One of the new 1926 Ford coupe is in the Cooper and Hostert garage and looks swell too.

Mrs. Elmer Cooper, delegate of the Mokena M. E. church, attended the annual Rock River conference of the M. E. church, Friday at Elgin, Illinois.

Miss Lillian R. Mogle, of Indianapolis, Ind., is visiting her sister Mrs. Don C. Hall Jr.

Miss Mabel Schoeneck, has returned from Colorado, where she spent her vacation.

and Anna Radle, of Hammond, Ind., were guests at the Ervin Warning home, Sunday.

Richard Hensel has moved into his new quarters in the former Zumstein building in Mokena. He has opened one of the finest drug stores that Mokena has ever had. He has had the interior of the former store entirely remodelled and has made it a modern and up to date business place.

Mr. Hensel has been very successful since locating here in the Sutter building a few years ago. His drug store fills a long left want and the public accorded him a liberal patronage which enabled him to expand until his old quarters got too small, he had to acquire larger quarters to take care of his continually expanding business.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lowe have moved into the cottage vacated by Joe Lehnert who has moved onto the Barney farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Geuther have rented the Fred Hunter house. Mrs. Clarence Geuther and son have returned from Silver Cross hospital.

The Parent-Teacher meeting of Mokena which was to be held Wednesday night at the school house was postponed to next Wednesday evening.

Mrs. J. R. Butler entertained 17 members of the Seven Day Advent church of Joliet, at her home Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall Sr., write from their daughter's home Mississippi City, Miss., that they enjoyed their trip so far.

Look younger! Be younger!
Age has little to do with your looks or your feelings. It's the condition of your blood that counts!

And blood will tell! It tells in a

Why That Bad Back?

Is backache keeping you upset? Feel all tired out—so nervous and dispirited you can hardly keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys rid the body of poisonous waste. But if they lag, impurities accumulate and poison the whole system. Then one is apt to suffer backache, stabbing pains, headaches, dizziness and other annoying kidney irregularities. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with a diuretic.
Use Doan's Pills. They are praised the world over. Ask your neighbor!

Slants on Life

By J. A. WALDRON

When Money Doesn't Count

THE door of the mansion of Josiah Springstreet was opened by a servant in livery almost as pictorial as the uniform of a volunteer fireman, and the card of Count de Bonelle was taken to Miss Agnes Springstreet, to whom the count was paying court.

The Springstreets were ambitious for this younger daughter. Before Josiah had won his pile, his elder daughter, Gertrude, had made a commonplace match and was now a social nobody.

The Count de Bonelle was ushered into the drawing room and was soon joined by Miss Springstreet. They greeted each other warmly. It was whispered in the household that if these two should marry love would dominate money on one side and distinction on the other—a very unusual result.

A new maid to Miss Agnes, named Dolores, had been engaged the day before this visit of the count. Dolores was certainly a curious person, for when her mistress went to join the count the maid looked at the count's card. Then she stole downstairs and from the refuge of a heavy curtain spied upon the lovers. Their endearments affected her strangely, for she hurried upstairs again and dressing hurriedly for the street told another maid she had been called out unexpectedly.

Having an apartment in a neighboring hotel, as he said, the count visited the Springstreets on foot. As he left the mansion, he met the maid

Upon the Lovers.

ited the Springstreets on foot. As he nearby.

"Dolores!"
"Christophe!"
For a moment they stood looking at each other.

"Do you intend to marry Miss Springstreet?"

"Why do you ask?"

"I became her maid yesterday."

"But what about you and me?"

"What would you? I can't afford to marry you, my dear."

"Call me Dolores, please. And you never intended to."

"If you will be fair with me in this,
it shall profit you."

"Fair? A bribe, eh?" Dolores laughed, but not mirthfully.

"And we still can be friends."

"Friends?"

"Why not, pray?"

"Well, why not? And you love Miss Springstreet?"

"She is young and strikingly attractive. Men, you know—"

"I know you told me you loved me.
If I had money—as much as Miss Springstreet—would you marry me?"

"Can you doubt it?" The count looked at her tenderly and rolled his eyes.

"But I am without money, and so I suppose I must let you marry her—if you will keep your word. You said it would profit me. How much?"

"If you will further my suit, the day after I marry her I will give you ten thousand dollars. It shall be a part of the dot. I shall make a shrewd bargain."

"But what is your word worth? You once promised to marry me. Will you bind yourself by a paper that I may keep?"

The count looked at her, but her expression was inscrutable. "If I decline to do this?"

"Then you shall never marry Miss Springstreet."

"Well—my Dolores, meet me at Du-fanti's for luncheon tomorrow and I will give you such a paper if you agree to help my suit."

"Why shouldn't I help you, when we so thoroughly understand each other?"

They shook hands and separated.

The next day they met at Dufanti's.
Dolores had procured the making of a paper in plain terms and the count signed it. It was also witnessed.

When the count called at the Spring-street mansion two days later he was met at the door by Josiah Springstreet in person.

"So you're no count, after all—just a chef at Dufanti's, eh?"

And Josiah kicked him down the spacious steps, at the moment utterly indifferent to an aristocratic neighborhood's curiosity.

Again it was proved that a woman bent on revenge cares nothing for money.

And, by the way, when a woman is in love nothing else matters. Miss Springstreet and Christophe eloped
the next day.

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle.
Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THE CANCER GERM

SO GREAT is the popular horror of cancer that any new "discovery," whether of cause or cure, is eagerly grasped. Naturally, the greater the scientific authority back of the claim the greater the amount of belief accorded to it. So it is not strange that the report of a newly discovered cancer germ by two well-known scientists of London found a place on the front pages of practically all our prominent newspapers. The interest in the subject is intense among scientific men as well as laymen.

Most of the claims to startling discoveries of the cause or cure of cancer come from unknown or obscure men, whose previous knowledge or reputation does not justify any confidence in their ability to add anything of value to our present knowledge of this dread disease. But Mr. Barnard and Doctor Gye are both men of high scientific standing and any claim from them is deserving of the most careful consideration.

But science has little regard for authority, and even the greatest men in the scientific world must be able to prove their statements in order to have them accepted by their fellows.
So the claims made by these two men must be confirmed by positive proof and indorsed by others before they can be accepted.

Just what, in newspaper English, is their claim? Like practically all advance in scientific knowledge, it rests on the work of their predecessors. It has long been known that cancer could be produced by trans-planting a small bit of cancerous tissue from one animal to a healthy animal. Fifteen years ago Rous of the Rockefeller Institute found that the serum from a cancerous growth injected into a chicken would cause cancer, even after the serum had been strained through a Berkefeld filter.
This filter is so fine as to strain out any germ large enough to be visible through an ordinary microscope. So Rous concluded that if this chicken cancer was caused by a germ, it must be one so small as to be invisible, or as bacteriologists say, a "filterable germ." Now Mr. Barnard, by using the ultra-microscope, an instrument in which the object is photographed by means of ultra-violet rays, has found very small round objects, which he claims are the germs of chicken cancer, while Doctor Gye, from experiments on fowls, has concluded that this germ will cause cancer.

Even if the germ which Barnard has found is shown by further study to be always present in chicken cancer, it must still be proved that it is the cause and under what conditions it will grow.

BOOKS ON THE RUN- ABOUT CHILD

MANY books and pamphlets have been written on the care and feeding of infants. Much has also been written about the child of school age. But between these two groups there has until recently been a gap.

The child of from two to six has not even had a name by which it could be distinguished. Too old to be called a baby, too young to be called a school child, it had no distinct name until,
a few years ago, Dr. William Palmer of San Francisco very happily designated him "the runabout child."

The name also tells why children of this particular age have been largely overlooked. The enormous death rate among children in the first two years of life and the need of teaching mothers and nurses how to feed and care for infants have kept all the infant welfare organizations busy.
The need of controlling contagious diseases in the schools and of sorting out those school children who were defective in sight, hearing and mental ability is completely absorbing the school health workers. The child that is neither a baby nor a school child has been left to take care of itself.

This lack has been met in the last two years by the publication of a number of excellent books and pamphlets which are now available to mothers desiring information on this most important and critical period of child life. Some of the best are listed here, so that they can be easily secured:

His word is his bond!

A "personal guarantee" means very little to you, unless you know the man who makes it.

Ninety per cent of the things bought for your home are selected by the lady member of the firm. She is the purchasing agent. Most men admit that she is a capable buyer, and the reason is this: She must be shown — convinced by proof — that an article is what she needs and is worth the price!

For that reason, she sees the advantage of dealing with a local merchant — a man whose "personal guarantee of satisfaction" means just what it says.

She knows that what he advertises in this paper is entitled to her consideration. Because she has confidence in her neighbor — the local dealer — she can safely invest the family funds in what he guarantees.

Trading at home is a topic which has been much discussed and lamentably many communities fail to carry out this practice. Only too often do we find that people will pass up their home merchant and buy things in the city, not that these goods are any better or cheaper, but merely for the name of having bought such things in the city.

The money that goes out of your town to other cities does not do any good to your community. That money is gone forever! When money is spent at home, it means that this money gets into circulation again in your own town and naturally it means that your town will prosper. In unity there is strength and when the business people, the merchants and all the citizens of a community work together for the interest and benefit of their community, then prosperity is sure to result. One is dependent on the other and if one fails to do his part, it means the weakening of the community structure.

Your home town dealers and merchants handle only good goods, which are sold to you at right prices. You see what you buy when you purchase goods at home, but when you send away for it you are not certain whether these goods will please you.

The business men of Oak Lawn are aiming to serve their community to the very best of their ability and in return they should receive the solid support of the vicinity.

There can be no liberty without law. If we are to become more of a law abiding nation, we must first recognize the necessity of having educational institutions organized as training camps for citizenship second, make provision that our young people come under their influence.

It is a defense program of no mean proportions and worthy of the faithful support of our better citizenry. Better Schools League.

Many of our school patrons suffered the harmful effects of the unexpected freeze which came Friday night.

Our evening Achievement meeting will be held in the near future. All parents and friends of the school are invited and the admission is free. Come out and enjoy the evening with us. Watch for the date!

We have a newly organized play ground ball league, in our school of which Crystal Kluck and Wilbert Harnew are captain and Mr. Simmons is the umpire. We are organized for successive seasons of four weeks and keep a daily record of our scores on a score board provided for that purpose in our school. This plan is creating good play spirit and we are beginning to learn to play without fighting. The little folks also have organized play under the supervision of Mrs. Simmons.
